Italian law firm Loconte and Partners sets foot in London

With more than two decades of experience in tax law, Loconte and Partners is conquering the West End's commercial district. Angela Cordasco, senior partner at the firm, has been appointed as the London office's managing partner.

Leading law firm Loconte and Partners has a history of building long-lasting partnerships with foreign attorneys. As of today, it draws on a network of lawyers based in North Africa, Eastern Europe, South America and Asia, putting the practice in a good position to meet the needs of Italian and international companies doing business in Italy and abroad.

Their 2016 London opening, marks an important step for Loconte and Partners as it will be their first office outside of Italy. Angela Cordasco, who joined the firm in 2014, will take the ropes of the new bureau that will be mainly focused on wealth management services.

The decision to establish an office in the UK was a strategic one according to Stefano Loconte. Indeed, this acquisition will allow both tax lawyers and accountants to offer their expertise in crossborder transactions between Italy and the UK as well as answer client questions' regarding the fiscal and legal consequences of the controversial Brexit referendum.
