On 10 and 11 September 2018, the Master in International Tax Planning of the Sapienza University of Rome and the Master of International Taxation of the University of Hamburg held in Luxembourg the 9th Joint Seminar.

The venue of the seminar changes each year and every three years it is located in an International or European Institution. The 2018's edition took place in Luxembourg.

On 10 September, students of the two Master Courses took part in the Seminar. On 11 September, they participated in a visit at the European Court of Justice.

As every year, the Seminar topic has been chosen some months before and German and Italian students of the two Master Courses have been asked to prepare their presentations.

This year, according to the location, the selected topic was dedicated at «Pending Cases in Direct Taxation».

In coherence with this topic, each speaker (or group of speakers) has been requested to prepare a comment on a case, which was
